efficacy of intravenous gammaglobulin in treating a case of Kawasaki syndrome.

Kawasaki syndrome is a systemic vasculitis of unknown etiology. In addition to the cardiovascular and gastrointestinal symptoms, central nervous system involvement and ocular complications may occur. The major complication of Kawasaki disease is coronary artery aneurysm which leads to a high incidence of recurrent coronary artery involvement and may eventually result in myocardial infarction. This is an unusual case of a 2-year-old boy who developed Kawasaki disease with ocular, gastrointestinal, and nervous
